Wait Mason played a cruel joke on Dr. Crumbine the other day. The doctor wanted Walt to write a poem on "Swat the Fly" which he could use in his monthly bulletin. The doctor is great on swatting the fly. Walt wrote the poem all right, but the tenor of it was to swat the man who swatted the fly. Walt's idea was that if a man had to swat anything he should swat a bumble-bee or yellow-jacket or some other insect that had a stinger that could fight back. His poem will not appear in Crumbine's bulletin.—Ansonia Sentinel.

Dickinson's Democracy Distasteful.

Mr. Dickinson is a democrat. His presence in the cabinat of a republican president has not been looked upon with favor by some of Mr. Taft's political advisers. They thought the office of secretary of war should be held by some one of the president's own party, and they also pointed out Mr. Dickinson might prove a source of embarrassment when the presidential campaign of 1812 begins. Naturally, Mr. Dickinson also found the discussion in the cabinat of party measures often a personal embarrassment. Bridgeport, Conn., May 12.—Flights for altitude and the carrying of passengers were the features at the aviation meat here today. Weather conditions were threatening and many people were kept away although it was estimated that fully six thousand people were kept away although it was estimated that fully six thousand people were in the aerodrome when the flights started. The air near the ground was gusty and the sending of wireless messages to a New York newspaper and the shooting at targets was postponed. These parts of the programme will be carried out tomorrow if conditions are favorable.

McCurdy was the first to make an ascent and flew in a circle about six miles over Long Island Sound reaching an altitude of 3,000 feet. Beachey followed McCurdy and went to a height of 5,000 feet, circling out over the sound on his return to the field, his landling being preceded by a series of spectacular dives to within a few feet of the ground and a sudden rise again into the air.

McCurdy, carried the two passengers, Frank Arnold and Miss Margaret Shea, winners in a voting contest carried on by a local newspaper. Weather conditions were such that an extended flight was not considered advisable and the two were taken about ten feet up into the air for a distance of about 100 feet across the field. At the conclusion of her flight Miss Shea was presented with a bouquet by Mayor Buckingham, the gift of her shopmates.

The day's exhibition closed with a series of flights' by McCurdy and Flight at Bridgeport. Friction Over Mexican Situation.

There were others who thought that Mr. Dickinson incurred some criticisms by his conduct of the department. Recanly there have been reports of friction over the Mexican situation between the state department and the war department. In some quarters it was asserted Secretary of State Knex was being overshadowed by Mr. Dickinson, and there were reports that the former contemplated resigning, but these met with official denials. There had been no hint that Mr. Dickinson contemplated retirement.

Taft Moved Quickly.

Taft Moved Quickly.

The president moved swiftly when he found he had to select a new secretary of war. On Wednesday night Secretary Hilles was despatched to New York poste-haste. He met Mr. Stimson the next day, but the latter wished to consult with his father, who was then on the Atlantic, bound for Europe Mr. Hilles came back to Washington and Mr. Stimson resorted to the wireless.

Father Advised Stimson to Accept.

The Newspaper as a Salesman

The newspaper is the most successful salesman because it talks only when pairons are in a condition to be talked to. It is like any other salesman, aided by the goods proving up to the standard. To have the salesman saying one thing and the goods another is poor form in any business. Home-folks support trade and a home paper like The Bulletin is welcome in the home and regarded with confidence and favor, so through it the merchant gets to new customers in a respectful and respectable way. If the goods offered square with the advertisement they talk loudest for future business. The house which invites public confidence by its honor and integrity has no complaint to make about the zone og influence or earning capacity of its advertisements. Space in a newspaper handled with honesty and candor talks all the time, and it never ceases to make a good impression. If well conducted, the business announcements of such a house are as constantly looked for as the score or batting average of the home team, and they have the pull of an electric motor. The newspaper as a salesman charges up no hotel bills or incidentals—it does business at a fixed rate. This is the reason the greatest business men are the greatest buyers of newspaper space, because they know it is the straightest, quickest and best way of reaching good customers.
